THE NEW PLAY

William Collier's Latest Effort a Good Farce.
By J. W. McCONAUGHY.

IN SOME two hours of humorous demonstration, William Collier at the Fulton theater establishes the fact that advice is not the revered institution that we had been led to believe by the philosophers of the New England school. The name of the piece is "Take My Advice," and after you get through laughing at it you think that advice is the last thing you will ever monkey with again.

It is a kind of new angle on the advice problem. Heretofore the sympathy has always been on the side of the man who gives advice. The Collier play portrays the miseries of the man who has to take advice.

Left Million in Will.
Collier is William Ogden in the play, and the father who left a million dollar estate with a string to it evidently was onto the mental habits of the human animal on the advice proposition. He fixed the will so that William didn't have to ask for advice. He had to take it. A Jack Cornish is made his business and financial adviser and a Prof. Hugo Kardly is named as the culture and general erudition expert. Both of these men are willed on him in a will that defies the chilled steel drills and nitro-glycerine of the best legal will crackers.

Young Ogden is also forbidden to smoke or drink, and among the other things willed on him in that malediction will is the daughter of Prof. Kardly. This young woman is a sort of a combination of a hypochondriac and militant suffragist, and she carries around with her that genial cast of mug that would freeze a hydrogen flame.

The Natural Conclusion.
The more you look over the provisions and workings out of the will in the early part of the first act the more you think that Ogden's father could not have had any real affection for him.

But a balm develops early. Ogden is the president of the Pacific Lemon company—the principal legacy. He discovers that it is possible to play hooky from the ranch about four days out of the week to go to San Francisco for treatment for his nerves—a treatment that he takes in the well known cafes of that charming city. Then he has a cache behind a panel in the living room wall and another in a suit of armor which is one of the "antiques" that Prof. Kardly has bought for him.

But he really gets interested when Thomas Brooke, a wealthy New York lawyer and his son and daughter, Paula, come out to look the place over and buy $50,000 worth of stock in the lemon company. Ogden sees the daughter, and he immediately remembers Diana Kardly, only to make up his mind to forget her at any cost.

As soon as he and Paula begin to know each other a little, he begins to know many things. She shows him that most of the "antiques" that Prof. Kardly has been buying for him are newly made. The professor is taking off the difference in the cost. Then he discovers that Cornish has run him into debt through speculation.

Then things begin to happen. He takes charge of the whole business himself, makes Cornish taking off the difference in the cost. Then he discovers that Cornish has run him into debt through speculation.

Collier was excellent throughout, and as he has most of the important stuff, there isn't any trouble. Helena Collier-Garrick was good as the fat sister with an imperishable appetite and John Arthur and John Adam as the Chinese and German servants, got many a laugh. Charles Dow Clark has a part in Prof. Kardly that might be softened somewhat, and Wm. Lamp as Cornish only fits into the general background of the star.

Lincoln's Old Age Rules.

The following were Abraham Lincoln's maxims for longevity: "Do not worry, eat three square meals a day, say your prayers, think of your wife, be courteous to your creditors, keep your digestion good, steer clear of billiards, exercise and go slow and easy. Maybe there are other things that your special case requires to make you happy, but my friend, these, I reckon, will give you a good life."

Receptions

An elaborate and brilliant affair of the season was the "at home" given on Friday afternoon from three to six by Mrs. Horace R. Stevens and Mrs. James A. Murdoch, at Mrs. Stevens' home on Union avenue.

Standing at the door to receive the guests were little Misses Helen Murdoch, Margaret Stevens and Ellen Thompson.

The reception hall was decorated artistically in wild smilax red carnations and red crepe paper, draped over the electric light fixtures.

Mrs. Stevens' gown was of gray messaline with rich trimmings of silver. Mrs. Murdoch's gown was scarlet crepe de chene with black and gold braid trimmings.

The women who assisted in receiving were: Mesdames J. H. Nations, W. R. Brown, U. S. Stewart, J. A. Rawlings, Frank Turner, Van C. Wilson, Chas. B. Stevens, R. M. Ratliff, E. K. Talbot, Misses Elizabeth Stevens and Virginia Stewart presided at the punch bowl, from which they served fruit punch.

The dining room table was gorgeous with an immense center piece of cluny lace. In the center stood a large cut-glass bowl, filled with red carnations, and in the bowl was a cutglass vase filled with the same flowers. Southwestern Fuel Co. was graciously draped round and on the table large streamers of red ribbon were run from each corner of the table to the chandelier, and after candelabra holding red candles lighted, completed the color scheme of red.

The young women serving in the dining room were: Misses N. Van Surdam, Gertrude Ellis, Margaret Dixon, Olive Davis, Frances Clark. A salad course was served.

During the afternoon Mrs. Bertha Stough, Mrs. W. D. Howe, Mrs. Lella Moore and Miss Gertrude Ellis sang. There was also music furnished by an orchestra.

The invited guests were: Mesdames Claiborne Adams, E. Adams, M. Almsa, Richard Almsa, Frank Almsa, August Andrews, M. Andrews, V. B. Andrews, H. Aldridge, W. E. Arnold, W. H. Austin, S.
